

Do not overturn New Jersey's Consumer Protection Act. My quality of life has improved significantly by not having unsolicited calls for telemarketers whether I do business with them or not. It is an intrusion and represents a gross invasion of my right to enjoy my evenings without interruptions from people trying to get at my money. We have turned off our telephone ringers because telemarketing calls were so frequent that it was distressing. We listen to our answering machine before answering just to see if it is a telemarketer. Since adding ourselves to the list, things have calmed down, but we still approach our telephone with trepidation because of our prior experiences. This law has given me a little bit of confidence in my government. Please do not undermine the good that this Consumer Protection Act is doing.
